NEW CALEDONIA

Description

New Caledonia is extracted from the Espirito Santo region, Brazil, a city renowned for its beautiful beaches and coastal cuisine. Not only does Brazil offer its visitors a fascinating culture, its geodiversity allows it to create a stone such as the New Caledonia, filled with charm and authenticity, a perfect combination for anyone who is lucky enough to incorporate a parcel of this Brazilian jewel to their decor.

This granite has a very consistent grain structure between slabs. New Caledonia is gorgeously complex with nuances varying between charcoal greys to pale greys and whites. Thanks to its consistent texture, it is ideal for wall panels, large floors and kitchen countertops. Because this granite's grain is so fine, there is no epoxy resin applied in production. As it is the case for any natural stone, a sealer is recommended to extend its beauty over time.
