SILVER BROWN WAVE

Description

Silver Brown Wave is a very resistant marble that offers a combination of rich black background with white and dark-grey veining. Its marked veining and the richness of its silvery color bring an extraordinary level of sophistication to a room.

In the course of the polishing process, an epoxy resin is applied to the stone's surface to fill part of its porosity (or pores) and natural cracks that may be apparent. This has no incident on the durability, the maintenance or the beauty of the natural stone. It is possible that certain pores are too small to contain efficiently the resin, and reopen during the finishing stages. However, this does not affect the stone's quality or beauty. Such as it is the case with many natural stones, it is recommended to apply a sealer to extend its beauty through time.
